The scene occurs inside the saloon bar of the cafe near the terminal, when John Conteh and his bodyguards are attacked by the Anti-Revolutionary Brigand (R. Tanni). The victim is a young woman, Julia De Oliveira, who is pregnant. The guard suffers serious wounds to the face. The night watchman, Josefino, is then saved by the intervention of Pinhão, who after some time, forces the attacker to surrender. Later, Julia explains to John Conteh, with a touch of cynicism, that she had an affair with him because she had seen him as a father figure and that she has not committed adultery. Since then, Pinhão has become a close friend of Conteh. Two episodes of the film are in the church, when John Conteh asks the priest to reveal the name of his father, to whom he has been looking for many years. The priest refuses, saying that the name will hurt the church. Julia, in the meantime, has heard some fragments of what the conversation was. The attack, through the intervention of Pinhão, becomes a cunning trap for John Conteh and the bodyguards, 2d92ce491b
