combination of fecal occult blood test (FOBT) and fecal DNA test (FIT), and they are the only tests recommended for colorectal cancer screening in the population with average risk of cancer. In fact, in the population with average risk of colorectal cancer, there is not significant difference in the cancer-specific mortality rate between those who carry both tests and those who do not carry both tests. However, it is important to emphasize that these results were obtained in a population with average risk of cancer, and they are not valid for those with the high risk of colorectal cancer. In addition, there are many doubts about the fact that stool FIT is a significant biomarker of colorectal cancer. Finally, there is no evidence of association between fecal DNA test and mortality from colorectal cancer in bodies of two young women were found on the verandah. Both women have been stabbed to death. "Autopsies on the two young women revealed that they died from blood loss due to stab wounds and there was no other visible injury on their bodies. "The police had no trouble identifying either woman and are tracing their family history and the social network to establish if there are any clues as to where they may have been taken or who they may have met." At the time, police believed the third person was in hospital after sustaining a gunshot wound.

Q: HTML form does not POST to given URL I'm trying to send a form to a PHP page. I've used this exact code to successfully post to a PHP page before, but I'm having a lot of trouble today. I've tried a few different variations of the form code
